

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

- 5 A motorized woodworking tool is provided having a base with a metal top having a generally planar workpiece support surface. A low resistance surface layer is applied directly to the workpiece support surface to provide a low friction, highly durable surface for cooperating with a workpiece placed thereon for sliding contact with the surface layer during the cutting operation.